1. <https://egausa.org>

Embroiderers' Guild of America

A good range of free projects as well as a fabulous downloadable book A Little Book of Embroidery Basics, 66-page book detailing embroidery requirements, stitches and finishing techniques. Also, a downloadable guide to colour washing a needlepoint canvas background.

2. www.antique-patternlibrary.org

This website was established and is run by the New Media Arts Inc, a non-profit organization based in America.

This ongoing project is an effort to scan craft pattern publications that are in the public domain, to preserve them, so we can keep our craft heritages in our hands. Most of these scans have been graphically edited to make the images easier for craft workers to see, and to reduce file sizes. They are available, for free, to anyone who wants them, for educational, personal, artistic and other creative uses. One could spend hours just randomly browsing the patterns and get lots of design inspiration!

3. www.luzine-happel.de

This website by Luzine

Happel is devoted to Schwalm whitework. It has great pictures of Schwalm and when you have finished browsing her site, click on the link to her Blog for fantastic photos of her own and some historic, Schwalm embroidery.
